Three Person Exhibition for Open Studios and Fall 2007

Works on panel and paper by GUERRA, BLIGH and WOOD

Ana Guerra's oil on panel pieces are made with many layers of transparent paint, creating complex spaces punctuated by random occurrences. Her work is in the collections of the Frost Art Museum, MIT, UPenn and many private Collectors, among others. She has exhibited her work actively since 1973 at museums and galleries throughout the Northeast and Midwest USA. She was awarded a Painting Fellowship by the Cintas Foundation.

David Bligh's mixed media works on paper evolve from his studies of philosophy as relative to creating art. He speaks of Making places...as models or maps for emotion and memory... distilled from my trying to make a place that is familiar yet unknown. Utilizing innovative printmaking techniques combined with refined painting and drawing skills, Bligh creates layers of sophisticated subtle colorations and textures. Bligh's exhibition experience includes the Lancaster Museum of Art, PA; International Competition, Agora Gallery, NYC; Rhode Island School of Design; Sumei Arts in Newark, NJ and Clark University Gallery, among other noted galleries in the Northeast.

Jennifer Wood originally trained as a glassblower and sculptor; she has been painting since 1990. Combining drawing, painting and collage she creates mixed media work that is influenced by nature, psychology, commerce and global considerations. Her current pieces are on panel, paper or canvas and combine detailed painting with found materials, antique stamp images, maps and unexpected objects. Her query to the art audience Can it make you wonder in a new way?, is playful but also serious. Wood's exhibition experience includes numerous shows at MassArt, as well as Group Shows at the Society of Arts and Crafts and Cyclorama both in Boston, among other galleries.

This exhibition will run through October 9, 2007. Hours are by appointment Monday through Saturday, and for Open Studios weekend only 11 AM - 6 PM both days, September 15 and 16. Gallery AA/B is located at 535 Albany Street, Suite 3B, Boston, MA.
